LOGLINE

In an impassioned message from the grave, one concentration camp Liberator forces us to remember the horror humanity is capable of. Utilizing actual photos from the Buchenwald concentration camp, and a soulful performance by Harrison Young, Inheritance is a gut-wrenching experience that not only informs, but puts the burden of defending humanity squarely on the viewer.

125-WORD SYNOPSIS

On the eve of his Grandfather's funeral, a young man receives his inheritance. It is not a dowry of riches, but a simple manila envelope containing photographs and a letter. As the young man sifts through the worn and tattered photos he can not believe his eyes. The images are horrific. Dead bodies neatly stacked in rows. Ovens filled with half-burned human corpses. In shock, he slowly sifts past the horrible imagery to the letter, a powerful and impassioned recounting of April 11, 1945, the liberation of the Buchenwald concentration camp. His Grandfather describes the horrors of the camp and the shame he felt for locking these feelings and images away. He tells him that this can never be forgotten, and this is his Inheritance.

250-WORD SYNOPSIS

Inheritance is a labor of love based on director Paul Cuoco's experience of learning that his Grandfather was a liberator at the Buchenwald concentration camp during World War II. Using his Grandfather's photographs combined with thorough research, Cuoco crafted this film to honor his Grandfather and all of the men who witnessed these atrocities first hand, as well as to honor the memory of those who were forced to endure it. The following is a short synopsis of the film itself: On the eve of his Grandfather's funeral, a young man receives his inheritance. It is not a dowry of riches, but instead a simple manila envelope containing photographs and a letter. As the befuddled young man sifts through the worn and tattered photos he can not believe his eyes. The images are horrific. Image after image of dead bodies neatly stacked in rows. Ovens filled with half-burned human corpses. In shock, he slowly sifts past the horrible imagery to the letter, and reads his Grandfather's words, a powerful and impassioned recounting of that fateful day, April 11, 1945, when he and his company came upon the Buchenwald concentration camp. His Grandfather describes through haunting words and ghastly photographs the horrors of the camp, its effect on him, and the shame he felt for locking these feelings and images away for fifty six years. He pleads to his grandson that this can never be forgotten, it is now his burden to bear, and this is his Inheritance.

Inheritance

director's statement

Inheritance is not quite a work of fiction. It is a dramatization of my own experience days after the death of my Grandfather where my father and my brother found a dusty old box while cleaning out his things. Inside they found the holocaust photos which are so prominently displayed in the film. They called me immediately, and sent me copies. I asked for them, though I wasn't sure if I truly wanted to see them. While my Grandfather didn't do anything as dramatic as writing us a letter as he does in the film, I felt that we were meant to find these photos and share them with the world. I could feel the gentle hand of my Grandfather encouraging me to make this film. He as well as these images haunted me from that day through the completion of the film, when I finally felt a sense of peace.

I want to thank my Grandfather, Anthony Cuoco, for his bravery, his example, and our freedom. I have done my best to honor him and all the men who served and witnessed this atrocious crime, as well as the victims themselves who toiled for years in those camps. I hope the film lives up to his and their expectations and in the end its intended purpose. As I wrote in the screenplay, "this cannot be forgotten. It cannot happen again."

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Paul Cuoco". The signature is fluid and cursive, with a long, sweeping underline that extends to the right.

Inheritance

paul cuoco writer-director

Paul Cuoco makes his directorial debut with Inheritance. For the last ten years he has written and produced a diverse array of creative properties from animated shorts to multi-million dollar themed attractions. Starting his career as an intern with Boston-based production company Horizon Media, Paul's talents were immediately apparent. He was quickly promoted to writer and associate producer overseeing the bulk of Horizon's corporate video projects before moving on to Universal Studios Hollywood where he rose through the ranks from Production Coordinator to Production Manager of Universal's Terminator 2:3D attraction. Driven by an insatiable need to create and not just manage, Paul re-focused on writing and producing, determined to push the envelope and create original and inspiring entertainments. He has since written, produced, and consulted on many films, shows and themed attractions spanning demographics and genres from creating internet animations during the dot com boom to developing television pilots and feature-length screenplays, as well as continuing to produce spectacular themed attractions including Universal's Shrek 4D and Revenge of the Mummy: The Ride.

Inheritance

paul cuoco & jeff loach producers

Paul Cuoco & Jeff Loach began collaborating during the development of the spec paranormal television series P.E.A.R.L. Though the series never made it in front of the cameras, a creative partnership was born with the common vision of creating inspiring, provocative, and innovative entertainment. The pair continued to collaborate nights & weekends, while also working full time in the entertainment industry as stage managers, coordinators, and production managers for companies like Brillstein-Grey, DreamWorks, and Universal Studios. After five years, three feature screenplays and numerous other projects, they decided it was time to put their money where their mouths are. Utilizing their personal savings and donations from friends and family, the two embarked on the ambitious, personal, and timely undertaking that would eventually become Spoils of War, a digital short film trilogy that combines their individual passions with extraordinary empathy to deliver a moving, thought provoking, and truly honest look at war and its aftermath.

Inheritance

doug delaney director of photography

Doug is a traditionally trained director of photography and color timer. Through his years of experience with film and digital technologies at Pacific Title Doug has emerged as a top notch digital cinematographer. Doug believes by lighting digital projects as if it were film and timing and processing the footage in post, incredible images can be captured for a fraction of the cost. His success and technical expertise in this arena has made him sought after as a digital intermediate colorist for such high profile feature films as The Lord of The Rings: Return of the King and the Matrix films.
